Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS from Washington transmitted the following dispatch to Tuesday morning newspapers:

Hauptmann May Be Mystery 'John' of Actual Kidnaping

Newspaper Hears That His Alibi Exploded Under Investigation

MAY GO TO JERSEY

Possibility That Murder Charge Will Supersede Extortion Trial

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The Washington Star said Tuesday that two secret witnesses had shattered the alibi offered by Bruno Richard Hauptmann to prove that he was not the "John" who figured in the Lindbergh kidnaping.

NEW YORK—(AP)—New York and New Jersey officials met Tuesday in a conference which may determine whether Bruno Richard Hauptmann shall stand trial for the kidnap murder of the Lindbergh baby before answering a ransom extortion charge. District Attorney Samuel J. Fiske of Bronx county, New York City, where Hauptmann has been indicted for extortion, went to Trenton, N. J., to confer with Governor A. Harry Moore and other officials.

Witt and Keith Move to Elm St.

Shoe Repair Shop and Jeweler Take Adjoining Locations

Two of Hope's old, established business firms completed their transfer to new store locations Tuesday.

They are: Theo P. Witt, shoe-repairing, and L. A. Keith, jeweler, and they have taken adjoining locations on South Elm street in the quarters occupied by Moore & Hawthorne before the latter's fire. Mr. Witt is at 108 S. Elm and Mr. Keith at 108 S. W. Witt originally opened for business in Hope in 1918 in the location now occupied by L. A. Carlson's Hope confectionery, South Main. Later he took the large building now owned by The Star South Walnut, which was constructed especially for him in 1919 by E. S. Greening. With the decline in the harness business, Mr. Witt found a smaller location more suitable. He had been on South Main street the last three years.

Mr. Keith, who formerly was located on Second street, has been in Hope 19 years.

7 Air Passengers Die, Channel Crash

Airplane Falls Near English Coast—One American Among Victims

FOLKESTONE, Eng.—(AP)—An airplane with seven occupants crashed into the English Channel only three miles from shore Tuesday on a projected flight to Le Bourget airport, France, killing all of them.

Two of the passengers were women. Four of the victims were English, one an American, and the other two were French.

The cause of the crash was undetermined.

A channel steamer near the scene brought four bodies to land.

Dizzy Dean May Not Open Series

Manager Frisch Speculating on Whether 72 Hours' Rest Is Enough

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—(AP)—Frankie Frisch's Cardinals, as coxswain of world series glory as their own great Dizzy Dean, headed for the fair of Mickey Cochrane's Detroit Tigers Monday night.

They were a trifle exhausted and their nerves were slightly frayed as a result of their dazzling drive past the routed New York Giants for the National League flag. No one of them knew for sure who was going to pitch in the world series opener, but a man they were confident.

Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief administrator, expressed the opinion Monday that "the state of Arkansas is broke."

Hopkins was asked why Arkansas could be "on 100 per cent federal relief."

"It's not on 100 per cent federal relief," he replied. "For instance, the city of Little Rock alone contributes $25,000 or $30,000 a month. As for the state's contribution—I think the state of Arkansas is broke. That's the reason."

Tuesday morning's newspapers followed this, however, with a statement from Mayor Knowlton denying that Little Rock paid more than $5,000 a month.

X X X

Arkansas had the misfortune to obtain a "drought-ridden" reputation early in the panic—in 1930.

We were truly hurt that year.

And on our past reputation we have been wholly exempt from matching federal relief money ever since.

But in the very next year after the drought, we harvested, in 1931, one of the best corn crops in the history of the state.

Conditions have been as good, relatively, in Arkansas since 1930 as anywhere in the United States.

Conditions are better in Arkansas in 1934 than for most of the nation.

The central northwest has lost its cash crop—wheat.

The middle West has lost its cash crop—corn.

But Arkansas not only has most of its cash crop—cotton—but it saved much of its early corn.

X X X

These are facts every well-informed Arkansas citizen knows to be true—and our political representatives in Washington are doing the state untold business damage by representing otherwise.

The national business maps published by the various trade journals represent the South, from Arkansas eastward, as being one of the best business districts in America today.

But our politicians say otherwise—so that the federal government may continue to be pressured into pouring additional tax money into local precincts.

X X X

We don't say that we couldn't use the extra money. But there are two kinds of federal money.

If the government is proposing to spend additional millions for work relief this winter as a new chapter in the national recovery program—that is perfectly all right.

But it is wrong for us to continue to accept 100 per cent federal charity at a time when our sister states—some of whom are worse off than ourselves this year—are being forced to match federal money with state and local taxation.

We Arkansans aren't a bunch of "starving Armenians" in 1934, and we know it.

The publicity coming out of Washington, D. C., begins to smell of political propaganda.

WASHINGTON—(AP)—His eyes filled with tears, his voice trembling with emotion, Hugh S. Johnson bade farewell Monday to the employees of NRA.

Grand Jury Nears End of Probe, But Report Is Delayed

Glenn Williams' Murder Case Among Matters Investigated

ARSON IS PROBED

Blevins Bank Robbery Also Awaiting Indictment Action

The Hempstead county grand jury which convened Monday at Washington was expected to bring its session to a close late Tuesday afternoon or night.

No indictments had been made public at noon Tuesday, Pinky Byers, deputy circuit clerk, announced.

Among the more important cases under grand jury consideration were three murder charges; the Cronce-Boyd-Bates arson case; and the Blevins bank holdup.

Several other cases brought up from Hope municipal court were being studied.

What will probably hold the greatest interest, if indictments are returned, will be the trial of three negroes, held for the murder of Glenn L. Williams.

Williams was shot to death in the early morning hours of May 19, last, while on duty at the Fulton toll bridge. Officers pursued the theory that he was killed when he resisted an attempted holdup.

The trio held for his murder are: Andrew Smith, Mosen Hill and Drew Williams, all of the Red Lake area near Fulton and each with a criminal record.

Another murder charge under grand jury consideration is the case of Malin Hawthorne, held for shooting Irvin Burns the latter part of July near the Hawthorne home, 10 miles south of Hope.

Burns died with shotgun pellets in both legs and the lower abdomen. Officers said that a renewal of a family row over a land title led to the shooting.

The other murder charge is against Jake Henry, Sprudel negro, who killed Mose Maxwell, negro, about two weeks ago.

The shooting occurred at night when Henry met Maxwell with his wife near a railroad crossing at Sprudel.

Charles Cronce, Martin S. Bates and Robert Perry Boyd, are charged with arson and robbery by intimidation in connection with a drugstore fire at Washington two years ago.

Three men are held for the Blevins bank robbery in which approximately $300 was stolen last May 10. They are Bert Waddle, Will Green and Roger Moore, all of Texarkana.

Civil Court

In a civil suit Monday, John McDonald was given $500 judgment against the Hudson & Dugger company for an injury he sustained while working at Bruner-Ivory Handle company.

A civil court jury was deliberating Tuesday noon on the case of Moore Finance company of Shreveport against Allen Ship in which the plaintiff is seeking to collect damages for an automobile which is alleged to have wrecked near Mena last spring.

No other civil cases have been called for trial.

Supreme Court in Critical Session

Federal High Bench Will Pass on Many Angles of New Deal

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The Supreme Court Monday began a term at which it will shape America's future by passing on the constitutionality of major phases of the New Deal.

Even at its first session—the high court dismissed, by government request, one of the cases which involved controversial legislation sponsored by the Roosevelt administration. It involved oil control. Others touching this subject and the president's monetary activities remain, with still others involving NRA and AAA probably will be added to the docket.

The suit dismissed Monday was one from Gregg county, Texas, in which the government sought to punish G. W. Smith and other producers charged with producing oil in excess of the quotas allotted them by Texas. Recently, it was discovered that through an oversight, since remedied, an executive order issued by the president several months ago failed to prohibit oil production above state quotas.

The government asked that the Gregg county case be cleared off the docket, but two others remain, dealing directly with constitutionality of the petroleum code—a part of the National Industrial Recovery Act—and the right of the government to regulate oil production.

Henley Is Given 25 Years on U.S. Theft

Sentenced by Judge Martineau for Postoffice Robbery

HELENA, Ark.—Jack Henley, youthful Saline county desperado, stood unmoved before Judge John E. Martineau in federal court here Monday as a sentence of 25 years on plea of guilty to charges growing out of the robbery of the postoffice at Keokuk, Mo., county, were read to him. His aged mother and two sisters sobbed hysterically as sentence was pronounced.

As the young man, who was convicted of the robbery of a Little Rock bank messenger a few years ago, was led into the courtroom by United States Marshal Virgil C. Pettie and a group of heavily armed deputies, one of Henley's sisters gasped and fainted at the courtroom door. Henley, his hands manacled, supported her with his shoulder until attendants could take her away.

He pleaded guilty to the three indictments against him. He was not sentenced, however, until shortly before noon.

El Dorado Special Train to See Rowe

Arkansas City Will Back Up Home Boy at St. Louis Friday

EL DORADO, Ark.—El Dorado baseball fans are going to St. Louis Friday night on a special train to witness three games in the World Series and to honor Schoolboy Rowe, ace pitcher of the Detroit Tigers, winners of the American League pennant. The World Series will open Wednesday afternoon in Detroit between the Tigers and the Cardinals.

This announcement was made after the St. Louis Cardinals had clinched the National League championship by defeating Cincinnati 5 to 0, as the New York Giants lost to Brooklyn 8 to 5.

The train will be known as "Schoolboy Rowe's Special," this being one of the tributes to be paid the great El Dorado pitcher.

The schedule planned will keep the El Dorado party in St. Louis through Monday. The two opening games of the World Series will be played Wednesday and Thursday in Detroit. The teams then go to St. Louis for three games, Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

Japs Figure in War Talk With Both United States and Russia

General Mitchell Warns America to Point Air Force at Japan—the Jap Army Thinks of War With Soviets

By the Associated Press

Japan and war were mentioned in the same breaths at three different points in the world Tuesday.

In Washington Brigadier General William Mitchell, retired, declared Japan is the United States' most dangerous enemy and that "our planes should be designed to attack Japan."

In Tokyo an official Japanese army pamphlet, described by an authority as expressing the army's views, urged Japan to make ready for a possible war with Russia, and asserted the United States has three airplanes to Japan's one.

In Southampton, England, a former member of Parliament told the British Labor party convention that Japan is making "deliberate preparations for a war which the Japanese consider essential."

Former Senator Hiram W. Bingham, president of the National Aeronautical Association, said dirigibles were better suited to ocean than overland flights. He advocated government subsidies for establishment of such lines.

Howard E. Coffin of New York, who was a member of the Morrow Aviation Board of 1935, said plans were advancing for construction of floating airships to be anchored in the Atlantic. The route would be via Bermuda and the Azores, he said, and added:

"Much the same thing will happen in the Pacific."

Bingham expressed conviction that German trade had profited from the flights of the Graf Zeppelin to South America, and French exports from that country's African air line. The dirigibles could be used by the navy for scouting in time of war, he said, if plans for constructing them were approved by the navy.

The former senator also advocated reduction of air mail postage to three cents for single sheet letters and two cents for postcards.

Clarence Weakley, Texarkana printer, joined The Star's mechanical department Monday as makeup man. Mr. Weakley was associated with the Texarkana Press composing room for three years. Mrs. Weakley will join him in Hope later in the fall.

103 Attend P. T. A. Instruction Meet

Diversified Program Observed at High School Session Saturday

The Parent-Teacher associations of Hope held their annual joint school of instruction last Saturday, at the high school with an attendance of 103 members.

The first half-hour was devoted to the various committee meetings, after which all the members assembled in the library to be led in community singing by Mrs. John Wellborn.

Mrs. C. D. Lester, president of the city council, was in charge of the program and in her introductory speech announced that Hope had furnished more state officers in the P. T. A. organization than any other town of its size in Arkansas, therefore Hope has gained an enviable reputation throughout the state.

Miss Mamie Briant presented a devotional, using as her topic "Building a Life." She stressed the fact that each individual has a choice to make in building his own life just as a carpenter has to make a choice of materials in building a house, and that Jesus, the greatest carpenter that the world has known, erected such permanent monuments that all the forces of evil have not been able to tear them down.

Miss Beryl Henry, superintendent of city schools, was the chief speaker on the morning program. She prefaced her talk by using a quotation from the Children's Charter "To every child understanding, and the guarding of his personality as his most precious right." Miss Henry forcibly stated that every child had the right to be accorded consideration that is shown to grownups. She demanded that we give youth a challenge, not coddling service nor safety. "Schools are primarily designed to encourage the child to live in harmony with his surroundings and home is the place for character growth and character development," said Miss Henry and gave several instances in which a child's character had been definitely formed in the home. She concluded her talk with the quotation, "Whoso loves a child, loves not himself, but God."

Upon the motion of Mrs. Jim Henry, a rising vote of thanks was given Miss Henry to show the love and esteem shown her by the entire community.

Mrs. R. V. Hall of Texarkana introduced the new magazine The Parent Teacher which now takes the place of the old Child Welfare magazine as the official organ of the P. T. A. She pointed out many new features that had been added and urged that the Hope organizations show a greater increase of members.

Secy. Ickes Will Ask Allotment in the New Congress

Declares Government Must Continue Until Industry Picks Up Load

IS SUBSTITUTE CWA

Civil Works a Temporary Group Disbanded at Close Last Spring

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Secretary Ickes indicated to reporters Tuesday that he would seek another substantial public works appropriation from the next congress to provide employment until private enterprise once more can take up all but the normal slack in unemployment.

Ickes said he would like to have an appropriation to continue work on a substantial scale until the nation is out of the depression.

About 200 million dollars is needed to carry on next year, he said; and added that virtually all of the 3 billion 700 million dollars the PWA had at its disposal is gone.

The federal works program last winter was handled by the Civil Works Administration (CWA), a temporary organization formed to expend a certain appropriation advanced for that purpose from the general funds of the Public Works Administration (PWA).

With the completion of last winter's program the CWA passed out of existence, but its parent group, the PWA, permanently handles such "bid" jobs as army and navy special contracts and local projects involving joint federal and local funds.

It is not known how the government plans to administer the proposed new PWA allotment.

Insull's Trial Is Begun at Chicago

Case Opens Against Man on Whom Investors Lost 143 Millions

CHICAGO—(AP)—Samuel Insull, Sr., former head of the 4-billion-dollar public utility system bearing his name, went on trial in United States district court here Tuesday for mail frauds which it is charged cost investors 143 million dollars.

Insull on Trial

CHICAGO—(AP)—Samuel Insull, who once directed the largest utility system ever dominated by one man and possessed a personal fortune of $100,000,000, goes on trial Tuesday.

The erstwhile Midas of the Middle West became the central figure in a public utility system bearing his name, when he takes his place at a huge table with directors of one of his 85 companies to answer charges of bilking investors of $143,000,000 through the sale of flimsy securities.

Preliminaries to the trial proceeded rapidly Monday. Sixty-six prospective jurors will report at 9:30 a. m. Tuesday to Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson.

Insull was in seclusion.

"He's up to his neck in work," said his son, Samuel, Jr., "and he doesn't wish to see anyone. He wants to keep his mind on the case and nothing else."

Farmers, merchants and salesmen, gathered from 18 Northern Illinois counties for the first jury panel, marched before Judge Wilkerson Monday. Only 13 were excused. To assure a good supply of veniremen

Boys Seldom Are Happy When Tagging Along

Keep First Aid Handy For Fainting Spells

If you are subject to fainting spells, or someone else in the house is, you should keep a supply of aromatic salts, handy for use in such emergency. Furthermore, you should be familiar with emergency handling of a person who has fainted.

In most cases, the reason for fainting is a lack of supply of blood to the brain. This may be due to a number of different causes.

In the first place, the blood itself may be deficient in the important red blood cells which carry oxygen, or in iron which is largely responsible for forming the red coloring matter. Such a condition of anemia may in itself interfere with the proper nutrition of the brain and bring about fainting attacks.

Sometimes the relationship between the nervous system and the blood supply is such that there is a sudden deviation of blood from the interior. This also will bring about a fainting attack.

The blood supply to the brain may be disturbed if you rise suddenly from a flat position. Sorrow, pain, fear, the sight of blood, or similar conditions affecting the emotions, severe bleeding, the effects of heat, or sudden weakness of the heart may produce fainting.

Usually the first thing to do when a person faints is to lower his head and keep him flat on the back. Raising the head is dangerous because it makes the supply of blood to the brain more difficult.

All tight clothing, particularly the collar, should be loosened so as to permit the easier flow of blood. An abundance of fresh air should be supplied—if necessary by fanning—because the need for oxygen will be great.

The nervous system may be affected by sprinkling cold water on the face and neck. The sudden shock of cold has a stimulating effect. If the person who has fainted is exceedingly cold, it is necessary to control the temperature of the body by applying warm towels.

Among the best stimulants for those who have fainted is aromatic spirits of ammonia. This may be inhaled, or smelling salts may be used, to stimulate the unconscious person.

If the person who has fainted is able to swallow, one-half a teaspoonful of aromatic spirits of ammonia may be given well diluted in cold water.

Obviously it is desirable for a person who has fainted and whose condition seems to be serious to have a physician's attention as soon as possible. In serious cases the doctor can try emergency measures which are of great importance for the recovery of consciousness, if not for the saving of life itself.

Here's Manhattan as The Camera Sees It—Book of Photos Is Exciting Study of New York

By BRUCE CATTON

No aspect of the publishing business is more surprising than the sudden recent popularity of the picture book. We are beginning to discover that the photographer makes an excellent reporter of the current scene. Suitably edited, his record can be more graphic and revealing than the written word.

The newest book of this kind is "This Is New York" (David Kemp: $1), a book of camera studies of the metropolis edited by Gilbert Selles. It is a deeply interesting book. All angles of New York are here—streets, skyscrapers, white ways, slums, bridges, crowds, everything—the good and the bad, the glamorous and the ugly, photographed in a way to make one understand the beauty and the terror of this greatest and most confusing of cities. It's a fine book.

If you like Don Byrne you should enjoy "The Laughing Journey," by Thomas Lennon (John Day: $2). It's a tale of lusty young men in the Ireland of a generation ago—men who fought and loved and died with laughter on their lips and an infinite zest for living in their hearts—and it's told with a gay lilt and an irrepressible humor.

MADE BY McELROY

BEGIN HERE TODAY

BOOTS RAEBURN, 18, elopes with 1855. LIND, swimming structure. When Raeburn goes to Florida, promising to send for her later, Raeburn goes to work in a department store.

Raeburn does not write. Months pass and comes word that he has been killed in a motorboat accident.

Boots meets DENIS PENWY, young author, and EDWARD VAN STEVEN, wealthy and socially prominent. She is in love with Denis and jealous of beautiful KAY CHILLINGWORTH.

Boots gets a job in a book store and goes home to live in order to help her parents financially. Edward repeatedly urges her to marry him and finally she agrees. On Christmas Day they go for a walk in the fog and Edward is found lying on the ground from a reckless driver.

Mrs. Raeburn learns she has a winning ticket in a lottery and plans to take her husband to California. Edward tells Boots the engagement between Denis and Kay is broken. Three days before Edward and Boots are to be married he finds a letter (never sent) from Denis telling Boots he loves her and is going away because he cannot bear to see her marry someone else.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XLVII

IT was a bright spring morning. Blue flags flew in the sky between cloud patches. There were tipping sailboats on the waters of the sound, and all along the shore men in rough clothes with caps pulled down over intent brows, worked at rigging, tugging at ropes, caulking seams, painting hull and spar.

"Tomorrow—tomorrow is my wedding day," thought Boots, bending to the wind, striding along the path that led among the rocks. She thought did not bring a thrill to her heart nor a flush to her cheek. This marriage was something she had promised to go into with her eyes wide open; it was a contract to be her husband was strong and fine and honorable and young did not matter overly much. She was fond of him; that was all. He had done a fine thing, a brave thing, in risking his life for hers. When she had been poor, alone and in need of a friend he had been that friend. In return for his many kindnesses she was giving him—herself.

She would make a good wife, she told herself seriously, as she walked along the arched, rocky promontory. If it were the only good thing in her life, she would be worthy of it.

Just there, where the twin birches hung themselves recklessly over the twist of sandstone, she had sat with Denis that long ago summer morning.

Just then they had talked; and even then she had been blindly, ignorantly attracted to him. But she had been an untutored girl then. She had not reckoned with the winds of love nor had she known how this great emotion might read and twist one.

Ah, well, Denis had gone out of her life without a word or a look or a backward glance. She was surely not the sort of woman to spend the rest of her days mourning after him, regretting what might have been!

She retraced her steps, taking the path that led homeward. Forsythia was yellow on all the slopes and tulip scabbards showed greenly everywhere. The lilac buds were bursting on the bare branches. It seemed to her that spring had never been more heartbreakingly beautiful than it was this year. Perhaps it was that her eyes were newly opened to its loveliness.

As she clicked open the slide gate

Miss Florida came to the dining room window.

"Telephone," she called excitedly. Miss Florida expected thrills these days every time the "phone rang. "After Mrs. Raeburn's wonderful luck," she was fond of saying impressively, "I say you never know what may happen next."

It was Edward calling. His voice sounded rather odd, Boots thought. Was she surely coming in for lunch, he wanted to know? Good. The Waldorf, then, at one. "But I told him I'd be there," the girl murmured to herself, as she lagged on the stairs. "Wonder what's the matter! His voice had the most curious note in it."

Miss Florida, observing her silently, told herself you couldn't figure out these modern girls. There was Barbara, cool as a cucumber and walking off with that grand catch tomorrow. And married once before, too, and widowed. Well, you just didn't know what went on inside their minds; they took everything as it came.

Boots touched her lips with a bright smile and rubbed some of it into her cheeks. She was so thin—pale, too. Edward would think he was seeing a ghost. She had a new blue taffeta frock with the primest and quaintest deep-sheer collar and a blue coat of quilt wool and a wide-brimmed hat to go with it. Edward wouldn't be ashamed of her.

He was waiting in the hotel foyer and rose as she approached, leaning on his cane. Why, everything was all right, she told herself, smiling back at him. She had been imagining things; his smile was just the same.

They ordered; the room was crowded. Edward had nodded to half a dozen people. Curious eyes had observed the girl with him.

"Tomorrow they'll know about us," Boots thought. She had insisted upon keeping the engagement secret all this time. "It will be time enough to make announcements when the marriage is a fact," she had explained to her rather surprised family.

"You look mighty sweet, Beautiful!"

"Thanks. How's the limp?" "Oh, I just keep the stick to get a little sympathy." He gave her his own engaging, white-toothed grin. "Look, darling, I've got something I want to show you."

Without warning, without preamble he put a square white envelope into her hands. She took it, slipped out the sheet within, read. Her eyes darkened; a slow flush crept over her face. With trembling hands she replaced it.

"Which means exactly—what?"

THERE was a melancholy railery in his smile now. It was as if his suspicions had been confirmed.

"Denis left it in some books he sent me the day he left—quite by accident I'm sure," he explained painstakingly. "I just found it yesterday."

"I don't know—I give you my word I don't know a thing about it, Edward." She was very pale now. The brief spots of rouge were like flower petals on the transparency of her cheeks.

"Come clean, woman!" No matter how serious he was, Edward talked the jargon of his generation. You never let anyone see you were hurt in Edward's simple code. You took your blows standing.

"Honestly, honestly..." But her protestations dwindled before the honesty of his dark eyes. Spaniel's eyes, she had called them once, deep-welled, brown, somehow pitiable for all their laughter.

"I was a big oaf not to see it before," Edward stated simply, lighting a cigarette. "I did have a sort of—sort of feeling you two liked each other pretty well, although you fought pretty much of the time. But for a while he seemed to be in Kay's toils. And then I fell for you with such a bang—don't interrupt me," he protested with a whimsical look. "I want to get this off my chest. And then I'm through for all the ages."

"There's absolutely nothing to it," she murmured, steadying the trembling of her lips and trying to still the fast beating of her heart. But the words of that letter were written there in flame: "You've been in my blood," he had said.

"Nothing to it except that you're just crazy about each other and haven't sense enough to get together."

She made a small gesture of dissent. "It looks like it, doesn't it? He ran away without even saying goodbye."

"This," Edward informed her, tapping the envelope which lay on the table between them "explains why."

"Look, Boots," he went on, planting his elbows squarely on the chair arms and regarding her with gravity. "I want to get this straight. You're in love with Denis, aren't you? Don't try to save my feelings. Give it to me straight from the shoulder."

She couldn't lie. Nor could she delude the blow home. But her eyes told him.

"That's that, then."

"It's something I couldn't help," she stammered. "It's like having a temperature. Give me time—I'll get over it. I promise you."

An old smile twisted his mouth. "Sorry, my child. Not good enough."

"Our party's off tomorrow. You're just a baby, my dear," he told her on a note of tenderness. "People are always saving you from yourself. It'll be little Rollo this time. No, you go off with your people and I'll take my cruise and when we both come back we'll be the best of friends."

"Edward, you're the—the—" She choked on the words. He was the best person in the whole world, but how could she say it?

A VERY tall young man in well-fitting English tweeds got down rather painfully from the big open car with the glass wings folded back like planes of a giant moth. "I won't need you until morning, McShane," he said briefly. "We make Pier 47 at 12. You'd better be here by 11."

"Yes, sir. And the young lady?"

A shadow passed over the other's face. "The young lady will be here, Mac. Just you be at the Sixty-seventh street door."

"O. K. sir."

The limping young man slipped into the telephone room, all gray and silver, at the foot of the circular staircase. He called a Brooklyn exchange.

"Miss Kerrigan? Look, I'm calling, as I've told you, on the Olympia tomorrow. Will you—or—come right over? I've something rather important to talk to you about."

He held up the two steamship tickets with a thoughtful air.

HARRY GRAYSON

Bob McAndrews, assistant faculty manager of Saint Mary's College, informs me that the institution has committed the heresy of heresies this season in not engaging a pigskin public relations counsel.

"The slogan for 1934 at Saint Mary's is 'Back to Normalcy,'" says McAndrews. "Having lost exactly 25 of last fall's flock, eight of them first string men, we naturally cannot prophesy a world-beating team."

"This we did a year ago, and the result what that the heads of some of the 'giant killers' grew almost as large as their newspaper weights, with four defeats as one of the effects. So pre-season ballyhoo has been soft-pedaled this fall."

But you can't keep a good Californian down—not for any length of time, at least—and it shortly is revealed that Saint Mary's hasn't much.

"However, even though we're silent on championship pretensions, our silence is more than the bushful good man modestly disclaiming. 'Oh, I'm not so much,'" goes on McAndrews. "Privately we feel that this year's aggregation of potentially great youngsters can be brought to the heights of our sophomore squad of 1931, which defeated Southern California and California in a row."

"We do boast a few things worthy of mention, one of them is the speediest set of halfbacks in America—Al Nichelini, the fastest big man, and Ed Hallman, the most rapidly moving little fellow."

"Hallman ran the 100-yard dash in 9.7 and Nichelini in 9.9 in the Fresno Relays last spring."

Poor Saint Mary's!

Salvaging the Wreckage
"One of the flouziest forward pass combinations in football will be that of 'Harry the Horse' Mottas at right halfback and Eddie Erdelatz at end," continues McAndrews. "New York fans who saw these two for a few minutes last season need no other reminder. Chinito Contratto, sophomore fullback, is said to be the closest approach yet to the famed Dark Angel Brovelli."

"Malcolm Fiese, a ranking quarterback who has been out of the spotlight for two campaigns, due a bad knee, is expected to do plenty of tricks in the realm of long distance punting."

"Two of the line stalwarts who 'held the bridge' when Fordham was on the one-inch line last fall (Californians are good at measuring, too) will be on the structure when the Galloping Gaels again face Fordham on October 20. They are the barrel-built Nubb Ebluayan at guard and towering John Yezerski at tackle."

"Coach Slip Madigan's most perplexing problem is cutting the squad of 62 fine players to a working group of a little more than half that size."

"Madigan has abolished secret practice."

Photographers slipped in and snapped the young savages while those pressing the de-emphasis movement were not looking, and a delayed and abbreviated press notice tells us of the Saint Mary's team's fourth annual pilgrimage to the Atlantic seaboard. "Nearly 10,000 miles will be traveled," it reads.

"Our aim is to give our boys and their friends, who accompany us, an educational tour, as well as a geographic, artistic, and historic conception of our continent," declares Coach Madigan.

"Highlights of this year's trip, which will take the team through the southern states going east and through Canada and the northwest in returning, include a day at the World's Fair in Chicago and in Washington, five days in New York, visits in Montreal and Quebec, a motor trip through the Canadian Rockies with an overnight stop at Lake Louise, and visits in Vancouver, Seattle, and Portland."

"In the last few years, Saint Mary's teams have visited the Grand Canyon, Carlsbad Caverns, Boulder Dam, the World's Fair, Notre Dame, Washington, and Niagara Falls. ## DIZZY DEAN MAY

"Leave it to us," promised Dizzy to the excited fans, who blew the old town wide open Sunday night with one of the most tumultuous celebrations St. Louis had ever seen. Then the big fellow, who clinched the pennant Sunday by shutting out the Cincinnati Reds, 9 to 0, for his thirtieth victory of the season, looked up Manager Frisch to make another plea for the right to pitch the series opener Wednesday.

Manager Frisch was set on the rest of his starting line-up, figuring to use the same team that clinched the pennant Sunday, but he was still uncertain as to the wisdom of sending Dizzy to the mound after only 72 hours of rest. He wanted to give his ace the assignment, but wanted him to get his chance at his very best.

Although the starting pitcher represented a problem to Frankie, the wise ones figured "Wild Bill" Hallahan would be sent to the mound for the first engagement against the heavy hitting Tigers. "Wild Bill" has had indifferent success this season, but he stood the same Tigers on their tails in exhibition games this year at Detroit and Battle Creek.

In the Detroit exhibition, the one Dizzy Dean missed at the personal expense of $186, Hallahan allowed only five hits and the Cardinals won, 7 to 1. Most of the Detroit regulars were in that game. Added to Bill's success in these exhibition games is the fact he ranks as one of the greatest money pitchers in baseball, having won three and lost one in the world series of 1920 and '31 against the Athletics.

If Hallahan doesn't draw the assignment, James Otto Carleton, who has a side arm curve that baffles the best hitters when in control and whose peculiar style of delivery always puzzles first time batters, may be named. Carleton is noted as a cool weather pitcher.

Paul Dean, star freshman of the team, will be a sure starter all right, and could hurt the opener, but is almost a cinch to follow his big brother Dizzy. Bill Walker is the other sure starter, giving Frisch a pitching staff that succeeded in turning in 15 shutouts—seven of them by Dizzy—in the National League race this season.

It has been estimated that the population of Tokio will exceed 10,000,000 by 1964, barring earthquakes, wars, famines, and other calamities, at the present rate of birth increase.

GENERAL JOHNSON

the former cavalry officer, stocky and bronzed, told his audience that he was resigning as recovery administrator to still a running fire of criticism that was threatening to retard and paralyze NRA.

"Very often," he said, "the crucifixion of a man means more to the thing he is trying to do than all his living efforts."

His whole philosophy, he added, could be expressed in these words: "To die with honor when you can no longer live with honor."

Johnson plans to spend most of his time until October 15 preparing final records for President Roosevelt, and the five-man board that succeeded him as administrator. After that he probably will take a month's vacation before entering private business. It was reliably reported he would resume his former association with Bernard M. Baruch, financier and close friend of Mr. Roosevelt.

"I have had all I want of politics," he said in reply to a question.

His assistant, Miss Frances Robinson, also has resigned and will go with Johnson to his new duties, whatever they may be. She was in the background Monday as the general faced his audience of fellow workers.

Johnson called upon ten members to tell what they had learned during the day, and it was unanimously agreed that the school of instruction had been very worthwhile.

INSULL'S TRIAL

the judge ordered a second panel of 60.

Carpenters set up a 22-foot shelf for the exhibits in the case and federal attaches labored in with a small mountain of books, ledgers and files concerning some 50 companies.

So many witnesses will bring in so many records that a special register was opened to register them. It was agreed that each side, the government prosecutors and the Insull attorneys, may have a team of six accountants to keep track of the million dollar transactions which were expected to be disclosed.

Insull's son and 15 others, all blue-book financial figures, will answer the charges with him. Twenty-five counts of a federal indictment accuse them subscribing to the magazine.

During the noon hour the assembly retired to the school cafeteria, where an enjoyable two course luncheon was served.

At 1 o'clock the group reassembled in the library and was led in another group of community songs by Mrs. John Wellborn.

The first speaker of the afternoon was Mrs. Henry Haynes, who discussed "The New Curriculum." Mrs. Haynes said that education must not merely repeat the past, but that schools must keep pace with a rapidly changing social world in order to fit the child to take his place in society.

This new curriculum includes, under the guidance of teachers, all the experiences of childhood. All subjects are related to one another, so that the child will have a completely unified mind and not many merely a hazy understanding of many units.

Mrs. Haynes emphasized the fact that

Old Folks Like This Laxative

Because of weakened digestive organs, old people need a thorough laxative, but a gentle one. Delicious Peen-a-mint, the chewing gum laxative distributes the laxative ingredient by chewing, uniformly into the system, thus giving "full" complete action that is more natural and gentle. Doctors regularly prescribe the laxative ingredient in delicious Peen-a-mint. Delay is dangerous, so today safely get back on schedule and stay there. Chew non-habit forming Peen-a-mint for constipation.
